- passion for cycling

love for the sport

challenge himself within the broad cycling community willing to merge in an international environment

“I never truly had the opportunity to experience a strong sense of team spirit. While I consistently rode in support of the team, I rarely received assistance in return to execute a plan or receive a lead-out. When I found myself at the front, it was often because I had to fight for it on my own... I am eager to join a team where teammates are willing to go to great lengths for one another.”
